Practice Profile

June Cheung practises primarily in family and matrimonial law, alongside criminal trial and appellate work. Her experience as a senior public prosecutor, together with 12 years of extensive judicial service in the family, criminal and juvenile courts, brings a broad perspective to family disputes and a rigorous approach to the assessment of evidence.

Her matrimonial work encompasses ancillary relief, maintenance and legal costs provision, including cases involving trusts, third party interests and cross-border divorce. She also acts in children's matters, including custody, care and control, access, urgent protective applications, relocation and Hague Convention proceedings, as well as applications under the Guardianship of Minors Ordinance and the Parent and Child Ordinance.

June also advises and appears for clients in criminal trials and appeals, regulatory and disciplinary proceedings, and death inquests. She has extensive experience in commercial crime and High Court jury trials. Her service as Criminal Appeals Registrar gives her particular insight into appellate procedure, case management and the preparation and presentation of appeals. She is the author of the section on Coroners in Halsbury's Laws of Hong Kong.
